A series of tables, with instructions on their interpretation, present data on food utilization in each military service and in the Department of Defense (DoD) as a whole. The data cover food use on an item by item basis as well as in aggregate categories of major and minor food groups as well as process method. Separate sets of tables provide annual average and quarterly average usage values in pounds per ration; another set of tables lists annual average expenditures per ration. The data will facilitate logistic and operational planning for troop subsistence and provide a foundation for additional research and analysis in this area.

I. INTRODUCTION

During the fiscal year 1974, the Operations Research and Systems Analysis Office conducted a systems analysis aimed at developing a Uniform Ration Cost System. This investigation included an extensive study of actual food utilization in all four services. One objective of this study was to facilitate operational and logistic planning for troop subsistence by presenting detailed tables of food utilization data. Another objective was to provide a foundation for further research and analysis in this area. Due to the extensive nature of these tables, it was decided that they be published in a volume separate from the general dicussion of summary findings and recommendations. In view of the specialized requirement for this detailed data, routine distribution of this document will be limited to those that have been identified as potential users.

II. DEFINITIONS

Accurate and appropriate use of any series of tables ultimately depends on the establishment of a base of mutually understood terminology between author and user. Presented below are explanations of the key terms associated with the tables contained in this volume. The terms are presented in the order of their appearance. Additional information on the survey and data analysis methods and the assumptions are presented in Brandler and Deacon "Patterns of Food Utilization in the DoD, Volume I", US Army Natick Laboratories TR 75-65-OR/SA.

Usage – The quantity of food provided to the dining hall for the preparation of meals. The quantity of food purchased as opposed to food consumed. All usage quantities are given in pounds; that is, even where the common unit of issue is dozens or quarts, etc., the quantity has been converted to pounds.

Ration – The food provided to one man for one day. In food service cost accounting, a ration is the weighted sum of the number of customers (headcount) at each meal served. In these tables the number of rations served generally equals 20% of the breakfast headcount plus 45% of the dinner headcount plus 35% of the supper headcount. For example, if the headcount at breakfast was 100, at dinner 400, and at supper 200 the number of rations served that day equals 0.20 (100) + .45 (400) + 0.35 (200) or 270 rations. Recent revisions to the regulations have changed the dinner and supper factors to 40% in both cases. Midnight meals are weighted 20% or 35% depending on whether they are breakfast or supper type meals.

Annual Average Usage Per Ration – A quantity (lbs/ration) derived by dividing the sum of 12 months of food usage by the sum of the rations served in those 12 months.

[1] Brandler, P. and Deacon, R., "Patterns of Food Utilization in the DoD, Volume I," US Army Natick Development Center, TR 75-65-OR/SA

Food Item – A specific individual's food as opposed to any generic grouping; e.g., canned green beans as opposed to all forms of green beans (fresh, frozen, canned and dehydrated) or all green vegetables or all vegetables. Approximately 500 separate items have been included in the survey.

DoD Annual Average Usage Per Ration – A composite figure representing the weighted average of individual service usage experience. The objective was to derive a composite figure for each food item which placed emphasis on the data from each service in proportion to the size of that service's operation relative to total military food service. The weighting factors were derived by dividing the total number of rations served by that service in FY 72 and 73 by the total number of rations served by DoD as a whole in that same period. The resulting weighting factors were Army 41%, Navy 35%, Air Force 15%, and Marine Corps 9%.

Aggregate – The process of clustering individual item data into meaningful food groups so that statements of increasing generality can be made. Three tiers of aggregation (major food group, minor food group and process type) were used for all food items and a fourth tier (form) was added for meat, poultry, and fish items.

Major Food Group – The grossest level of aggregation. Twelve major groups were identified and are listed in Figure 1.

Minor Food Group – Each of the major food groups is, in turn, subdivided into subgroups. Figure 2 presents the 51 minor groups.

Process Type – After segregating food items into food subgroups, a further categorization can be applied which separates items by the commercial process for preservation. Figure 3 presents the process types.

Form – One purpose to which food usage data was to be applied was quality judgments. With this objective in mind a series of categorizations were assigned to meat, poultry and fish items which would group, for example, the higher "quality" beef items such as steaks and roasts separate from lower "quality" ground beef and beef patties Figure 3 presents the different forms.

Annual Average Expenditure – The monetary value of the annual average usage per ration priced using the 1 April 1974 DPSC price list as revised by change notices 1 and 2 dated 1 May 1974 and 1 June 1974, respectively.

Quarterly Average Usage – A figure derived by dividing the sum of three months food usage by the sum of the three months of rations served. Quarter One Average Usage encompasses data from the months of January, February, and March. Quarter Two Average Usage encompasses data from the months of April, May and June. Quarter Three

III. INSTRUCTIONS ON TABLE USE

Organization – Three sets of tables are presented: (A) Annual Average Usage Per Ration By Item, (B) Annual Average Expenditure Per Ration By Item and (C) Quarterly Average Usage Per Ration By Food Group. Within each of the first two sets of tables, three subsets of tables present essentially the same information in different order; i.e., alphabetically; in descending order of size; and aggregated by food group. The third set of tables presents two subsets of quarterly data summarized: (1) by major food group and (2) by minor food group. Within each subset the data are presented separately for each individual service as well as for the DoD as a whole. A general inspection of the tables reveals that the number of decimal places for an item entry varies from three to six places. This results from a rounding process which normally establishes the usage or expenditure per ration figures to the nearest thousandth (three decimal places), but which calculates additional decimal places (up to a maximum of six) in the event that item usage or expenditure per ration is of a very low order of magnitude (e.g., spices). It should also be noted that in situations in which the sum of the item entries differs from the indicated subtotal or total, the difference is due to rounding. Finally, the Table numbers referred to in the following discussion are in the sequence indicated in the Table of Contents; for example, the first Table, Table A.1.a, is "Annual Average Usage Per Ration By Item, In Alphabetical Order, for DoD".

A. Annual Average Usage Per Ration Tables

1. In Alphabetical Order – Data are alphabetically arranged item by item keyed to the generic food name first, then the unique item description within generic name, then the process name. For example, canned lima beans is listed alphabetically under B for beans (see Table A.1.a). Within the generic group of bean items it is listed under "L" for lima and within the lima bean entries under "C" for canned. Separate tables are provided for each service and for DoD as a whole.

2. In Descending Order Of Size – Data are sorted item by item in decreasing order of magnitude of usage per ration. For example, in Table A.2.a, milk, with the largest annual average usage per ration of 1.555 lbs per ration, is listed first; fresh white potatoes, with the second highest usage figure of 0.324 lbs per ration, is listed second, and so on. The second column of figures converts the lbs per ration figure for each item into a percentage of total annual usage per ration for all items; e.g., 23.235% and 4.835% for milk and fresh potatoes, respectively, in Table A.2.a. The third column provides the cumulative sum of these percentages from the first item in the list inclusive to the subject item entry; e.g., 23.235% and 28.070% for milk and fresh potatoes, respectively, in Table A.2.a. Separate tables are provided for each service and for DoD as a whole.

3. Aggregated By Major & Minor Food Group & Process Type – In this series of tables the individual item data are clustered into groups, all of whose members display common characteristics as specified by the type of group affiliation (major food; minor food; form for meat, poultry, and fish items; and process). For example, frozen grill steak belongs to the major food group "Meat, Poultry, Fish", minor food group "beef", form "cut", and process "frozen". Items are aggregated by process, within form for meat, poultry, and fish items, within minor food group, within major food group. For example, frozen grill steaks are clustered with all other beef, cuts, frozen. All frozen cuts of beef are in turn grouped with all "beef cuts", all cuts of beef with all "beef" items, and all beef items with all "meat, poultry, fish" items. As has been previously noted, for all items belonging to major food groups other than meat, poultry, and fish, there is not subclassification of form. For these items, clustering is by process within minor food group within major food group. For example, fresh carrots are clustered with all other "deep yellow vegetables, fresh". All different process clusters of deep yellow vegetables are grouped under "deep yellow vegetables", and all minor groups of vegetables are grouped under "vegetables".

In order to look up any particular item one would first refer to Figures 1, 2, and 3 to identify the item's particular group affiliations. Then one looks up the section of the table containing items in the major food group. Within this section one then searches for the appropriate minor food group subsection. At this point, if the item is a meat, poultry, fish item, one locates the form subgroup, then the process cluster and then the item; otherwise one locates the process cluster directly and then the item. It should be noted that group title headings in this set of tables refer to the items preceding rather than following. For example, if one wanted to locate DoD utilization of Dry Kidney Beans one would first determine its group affiliations; i.e., major food group "legumes and nuts", minor food group "legumes", process "Dry or Dehydrated". Then one would look up the section on "Legumes and Nuts" in the DoD aggregation table. Having located this section one would then look up the "Legumes" subsection, then the "Dry and Dehydrated" cluster. As has been pointed previously, having located the group title heading "Legumes and Nuts, Legumes, Dry and Dehydrated", the entry for "Beans, Kidney, Dry" is in the preceding group of items listed directly above the heading.

Besides providing individual item utilization quantities these tables also provide subtotals for the various levels of aggregation as well. The process is best explained by an example. Referring to the DoD aggregation Table A.3.a page 134, five items and their utilization quantities are listed. Then a heading is printed, "Fruits, Citrus Fruits, Fresh, Subtotal". On the next line a number is listed, 0.088. This figure is the total of the five preceding individual items entries and represents the total utilization in lbs/ration of fresh citrus fruits in DoD. In the case of citrus fruits, no frozen or dry and dehydrated forms are utilized; therefore, the only other process cluster (containing only one entry – canned grapefruit) listed is "Fruits, Citrus Fruits, Canned or Bottled, Subtotal" with a subtotal utilization of 0.004 lbs/ration. After the total utilization for all process clusters of items have been listed, the next entry is the heading "Fruits, Citrus Fruits  Total " followed on the next line by the figure 0.092. This latter figure is the total of the two preceding process cluster subtotals and represents the total utilization for the minor food group "Citrus Fruits". This sequence is repeated (item entries, process cluster subtotals and minor group totals) until all minor food group totals (here "Citrus Fruits" and "Other Fruits") related to a particular major food group (here "Fruits") have been listed. After the final minor food group total has been listed (here "Fruits, Other Fruits  Total ", 0.358 lbs/ration), the succeeding line lists the major food group title "Fruits  Grand Total " followed on the next line by the grand total of the preceding minor food group totals, here 0.450 lbs/ration. In the case of meat, poultry, and fish items an intermediate total by form is presented between process cluster subtotals and minor food group totals.

B. Annual Average Expenditure Per Ration By Item

All tables in this section are prepared and are used in a fashion identical with the preceding corresponding utilization tables with the exception that the figures in these tables refer to dollar expenditures per ration rather than pound usage per ration.

C. Quarterly Average Usage Per Ration by Food Group

In this series of tables data at the item level are not presented, rather data for group totals are provided.

1. By Major Food Group – quarterly average usage for each service and DoD is presented for four quarters for each of the 12 major food groups. The explanation of "Quarterly Average Usage" in the preceding section lists the months included in each quarter.

2. By Minor Food Group – quarterly average usage for each service and DoD is presented for four quarters for each of the 51 minor food groups listed in Figure 2.
